

The Perilous Venture of Lady Ackland.

CHAPTER I.

You have asked me again for my story of the Burgoyne affair. Yes, I ought to know about it, for it was indeed the most important affair of my life. Now, in that camp, I'll confess, was a girl I once had made love to, before the discussion divided us, before her brother was killed in the battle where I, too, was engaged. Kate Essex ever held this against me, as you will see if you follow me. Well, she was with Lady Harriet Ackland, the major's wife, in General Burgoyne's camp. I had been taken prisoner the day before the great battle. I have, as you know, some experience as a surgeon, which enabled me to be of small service in looking after General Burgoyne's wounded. And in all that fight I was wounded, prisoner as I was, but enrolled as a British surgeon's assistant. I forgot that we were fighting, them, as my friend Colonel Kenneth forgot it when a prisoner at Yorktown. I hardly noticed that General Burgoyne was preparing for a retreat.

But first the general was resolved to give General Fraser, who had died in the night of his wounds, a fitting burial. The regiments were mustered into a melancholy procession at sundown, and the sound of muffled drums mingled with the musketry and artillery along the outposts.

A friendly sergeant put me where I could see it all. The chaplain led, with head uncovered, the prayer book of the church of England in his left hand, and I saw then the girl I've mentioned, Kate Essex, supporting a lady scarcely older than herself, whom I surmised to be Lady Ackland. I was startled at sight of her in that dismal surrounding.

The scene, grim enough against the irregular outline of wooded hills, had sadder coloring from the soldiers, showing in all their appearances the hard, discouraging service of the yesterday, the officers with pale, serious, yet determined faces, many limping or bandaged.

The chaplain paused by the opening. Drums gave their muffled refrain, and all was ready for the service, never more expressively simple.

Suddenly out of the comparative stillness came the deafening roar of artillery. A ball tore the upturned earth at the chaplain's feet, casting dirt over his vestments, yet he kept on impassively, as if he were in a church. Several persons fell.

The sergeant, who was still at my side, cried: "D—n 'em! They'll not let us bury our general. D—n 'em!" But suddenly the firing stopped, to be followed by the low booming of a gun at minute intervals, adding to the solemnity of the occasion.

"Do you see, Sergeant White, you are mistaken! General Gates has found that, after all, it's not a movement of your troops!" I said exultantly.

"I was wrong," said he. "They're men."

By the time the box had been lowered it already was dark, and in the retreat to the works I lost sight of Kate Essex and Lady Ackland. I had trembled for them in that rapid firing; for, though the girl was prejudiced against me, I felt I could wish her no hurt.

The meantime, many fires were lighted—rather more, I thought, at once than the camp required, but I was not long in seeing that these were feints to cover retreat to Saratoga. Half the army were supperless—weariness and despair lay on nearly every face, and yet I was amused to see two young officers, apparently oblivious, at cards by the firelight. The enemy's line had ceased firing, as if they still were apologetic for the unseasonably shots the requiem of minute guns had followed.

The ensign who had taken me brought an order for me to report to General Burgoyne.

I found him in a spot rather apart from the preparations with Mr. Brudenell, the chaplain, who just said the service. Miss Essex and Lady Ackland, who was speaking earnestly. As I came up with the little officer, Kate Essex faced me with that same utter lack of recognition, but General Burgoyne extended his hand.

"Mr. Sedley, I'll restore you the dispatch you brought from General Washington to General Arnold. Here are all your papers."

I must have looked my amazement, for he explained bitterly: "This is unusual, and the prisoner may become the friend. Lady Ackland is insistent on going down the river to the enemy, where her husband, Major Ackland, is wounded. Mr. Brudenell and Miss Essex are for accompanying her. It's a dangerous attempt to make. I've told her. Into whose hands she may fall is uncertain."

He paused, walking up and down. "Being an officer of General Washington, you can bring them into the camp more safely than another. I have consented out of common humanity."

But my foe, Kate Essex, interrupted. "General Burgoyne, I'd prefer not to have this man with us."

"It's necessary!" Lady Ackland cried. "Will you let prejudice stand in the way?"

"Leave me, then!" cried the other passionately. "I prefer not to go."

"I can't, dear," Lady Ackland said. "I won't, but—I must get to my husband," she added.

"General Burgoyne," said I, stopping him, "I thank you for your very offer—much. I would wish to go of my slight service I may."

The girl seemed silly. "You did us much kindness at General Fraser's bedside last night," said the general courteously.

"Your excellency, chance has brought about some curious events," I said, bending my head.

"You can do a service," said the chaplain, "I believe, with General Burgoyne."

"If I may, I will go gladly," I said. "And I am sure that Miss Essex will grant me a privilege."

"I despise your favor, as you, sir," she cried, looking me full in the face, "being with the rebels when your family should have left you loyal!" This was woman left hysterical by the roll of the guns, I decided.

"I know. I expect nothing else. But it's no pleasure to be in your camp, nor did I make this chance," I said in a low voice to her.

"Ah, Mr. Sedley," Lady Ackland cried, "we need you. My poor Kate, you must control your nerves."

"I beg you all pardon," said Miss Essex. "I'll not stand in the way—of this man doing you this service tonight. I need not see him after—ever. But, in the face of this, how can you tolerate a rebel?" And she pointed to those dejected soldiers of the king.

"You may believe, Miss Essex, I will be to pains you shall not," said I, I think not without spirit.

"It's better that Mr. Sedley should go," General Burgoyne said, smiling as if the episode amused him even in his serious plight. "He has spoken tonight as the straightforward gentleman, and trouble, sir, makes us esteem each other. Of a pleasant day for myself I might have had to hold you a prisoner for exchange."

Whispering some words to the chaplain and Lady Ackland, he hurried us down the slope to the bank, I keeping well behind, near Lady Ackland's maid, a frightened Irish girl.

Half way down Lady Ackland let the others pass.

"Mr. Sedley," she said, giving me her hand, "you understand Miss Essex's prejudice. It's her brother's memory, whom she lost with us."

"No one better than I. You must know there are loyalist Sedleys, Lady Ackland."

"And, I waited to tell you, you have acted fitly in a position that must be as trying to you. Miss Essex's nerves have given way, I think."

"Thank you, Lady Ackland, much for remembering me when distressed over your husband."

"You are helping me reach him, sir," said she gently. "I never can thank you enough."

At the foot of the cliffs were two shifts. General Burgoyne had been unable to spare an escort. I told Brudenell I would take the maid in one while he should row the two ladies.

He agreed, helping Lady Ackland in, when Katherine Essex motioned the maid to follow into the same boat.

"I'll go with this person," I said to the maid.

"You prefer, I know, to be with us," said Lady Ackland.

"What difference is it, Harriet? This man is no more to me than the car. You thought I was weak. I may have been, but I want to show I am not now."

And, spurning my offer of assistance, she leaped in lightly, taking her seat.

"We have no time to talk about it," said Lady Ackland, losing her patience, while Brudenell helped the maid to a seat.

"We'll not talk about it, Harriet," said the girl.

"Shall I lead or you?" Brudenell asked.

"You would better, as you know the river."

We put out with the slow dip of the oars, keeping well under the high bank, where the defeated army was sounding its retreat.

CHAPTER II.

Now, I did not intend provoking her by so much as a word. I do not like hysterical women, whom I don't know how to address. I even thought this poor girl no longer attractive. But she bewildered me by speaking first herself.

"You are surprised I should choose to go with you."

"No; I thought it simply bravado," I said again with some spirit, I think.

"You read me well. It was that I told you again how wrong you were."

"I have every reason to expect that you, Miss Essex."

"I hate this situation."

"Neither of us has cause to be glad at the way chance has involved us," said I, bent on showing a Roland for her Oliver.

"And yet, Mr. Sedley,"—she had not before in the adventure called me by my name—"I must acknowledge to you, because I would be fair, that you have a right to your opinions—that you take your choice. You must not think I am altogether unfair."

I leaned on the oars. The little Essex was apologetic for her nerves, and then I pitied her.

"I understand perfectly the circumstances."

"Oh, I'm not glad," she cried. "I hate the situation, as I have said, but I could not block Harriet Ackland because of my prejudice."

"You were unselfish."

"For some moments she was silent, and then, strangely enough, began again."

"Yet I must tell you there are things about you I cannot help admiring—though I have the best reasons for despising your position when you should know better."

"There's small enough ground for admiration," I protested, lamely enough. She was surprising me with her remarks.

"Yes, frankly, there is," said she, "small enough. Yet I'm not such a bigot as not to respect the motive leading you to send me that very considerable note when—when Dick was killed."

"What else could I?"

"Nothing. Yet it modifies one's hate in a degree to know that the person who is wrong is not utterly devoid of feeling."

"I am glad you have found that out," I said, rather feelingly.

But she appeared bound not to leave me conceited, saying resentfully: "It doesn't matter whether you're glad or sorry."

"I know that only too well."

"How do you know?"

"The nature of the case," said I. "Of course."

A moment after she added: "I am glad I have had this talk with you, because we both shall feel easier."

"You do not know how much gratified you put me under," said I, half mockingly, but she thought I was earnest.

"You know you mustn't forget what I think of you."

"I wish I could," said I.

"You must not wish you could."

"How can I help it?"

"Because you know it's a matter of complete indifference to me."

Now, what can you do when a woman takes your witticism in earnest? Why, I kept pretending.

"But it isn't to me; never can be."

"And why shouldn't it be when you know?"

"When I know?" questioned I, half liking the pretense.

"That I know that you have a right to your opinion."

"A gracious concession," said I.

She added after a moment: "Yes, I'm glad I have had this chance to prove I'm no bigot even if you be traitor."

She went on after a pause which she seemed to give me for chance to frame an answer.

"You must have advanced to be a major."

"General Washington knew my father."

"Do you remember how I scolded you, whom I had just met, for being a dawdler?"

"It was sweet of you to be interested," said I.

"I was not interested beyond the impatience I always feel at seeing a clever man wasting opportunities."

"I know that," said I; "not that I'm clever."

"I do not know, Mr. Sedley, but that it is strange enough for me to be talking to you in this way. But—but—"

"I appreciate it in you, Miss Essex," said I, now entirely in earnest.

"This terrible battle—so much suffering softens one—"

The steady cry mingled with the cry of a night hawk. Something splashed out in the river. The firing had stopped.

"At last we understand each other better," said she.

"I hope so," said I.

"Oh, we must!" said she, almost humbly.

I had pulled rather slowly, and found on looking about that Brudenell's boat was around a bend of the river. When I commenced more vigorously, a musket was fired from the forest, the ball grazing her face.

then binding it on with the strip of cloth she had torn from her skirt.

"I wish I knew what to do. We have not anything. When we started, there was not a drop of wine or spirits left."

"I am such a fool," I cried.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Harmony in the Home Circle.

Peru-na protects our homes by driving out nervousness and indigestion.

comes with health. Plump, jolly children; calm, healthy mother; steady, kind husband. Such a family can face any ordinary trial successfully. The snappy retort is not heard; nervousness gets no foothold; trifles do not annoy; harmony prevails. Is this picture rare? Unfortunately it is. Excited nerves destroy good dispositions. They bring on all kinds of ill health in the mothers. Nervous mothers make nervous children; nervous husbands make the whole family nervous. Wherever there is nervousness there is catarrh; each breeds the other. Overcoming nervousness and catarrh cannot be accomplished by force of will; nature must be assisted. Read the following letter from Mrs. F. Ludering, Cornwall, Cal.

"I am fifty-eight years old and have eight children. I can truly say that Peru-na is the right thing to take for catarrh and nervousness; I intend to use it this spring also for a spring tonic. I went to a doctor six times for medicine for the nerves and to regulate the urine, but I did not feel any better; so I concluded to take Peru-na and I found out that it would do the work."

Indigestion is catarrh of the stomach. It spoils the disposition, and like all catarrhal troubles has been considered impossible to cure. Mrs. N. K. Brown, Alexander, N. C., suffered with it; Peru-na cured her. Read her letter:

"For several years I was troubled with indigestion, an increase of acid in the stomach, headache, loss of appetite, dizziness, and almost complete paralysis of the left arm. My friends advised me to try Peru-na, and after taking one bottle I could see great improvement in my condition. Four bottles cured me sound and well, and I have not felt a symptom of my trouble since taking Peru-na. I can never praise Peru-na enough and will always recommend it."

Inflammation of the mucous membrane is catarrh, whether in the pelvic organs, stomach, lungs or head. Elizabeth Gray, New Athens, Ill., says:

"For two years I had catarrh of the nose very bad. I doctored with two physicians but they did not help me. On Dr. Hartman's advice I began to take Peru-na, and am now completely cured."

Maybaskets are the order of the day—or evening, rather. WOMEN are assailed at every turn by troubles peculiar to their sex. Every mysterious ache or pain is a symptom. These distressing sensations will keep on coming unless properly treated.
The history of neglect is written in the worn faces and wasted figures of nine-tenths of our women, every one of whom may receive the invaluable advice of Mrs. Pinkham, without charge, by writing to her at Lynn, Mass.
Miss LULA EVANS, of Parkersburg, Iowa, writes of her recovery as follows:
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I had been a constant sufferer for nearly three years. Had inflammation of the womb, leucorrhoea, heart trouble, bearing-down pains, headache, ached all over, and at times could hardly stand on my feet. My heart trouble was so bad that some nights I was compelled to sit up in bed or get up and walk the floor, for it seemed as though I should smother. More than once I have been obliged to have the doctor visit me in the middle of the night. I was also very nervous and fretful. I was utterly discouraged. One day I thought I would write and see if you could do anything for me. I followed your advice and now I feel like a new woman. All those dreadful troubles I have no more, and I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash a sure cure for leucorrhoea. I am very thankful for your good advice and medicine."

"Spring Unlocks The Flowers"

To Paint the Laughing Soil."

And not even Nature would allow the flowers to grow and blossom to perfection without good soil. Now Nature and people are much alike; the former must have sunshine, latter must have pure blood in order to have perfect health.

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood troubles of all sorts. It is to the human system what sunshine is to Nature—the destroyer of disease germs. It never disappoints.
Poor Blood.—The doctor said there were not seven drops of good blood in my body. Hood's Sarsaparilla built me up and made me strong and well." Susan E. Brown, 16 Astor Hill, Lynn, Mass.
Dyspepsia, etc.—A complication of troubles, dyspepsia, chronic catarrh and inflammation of the stomach, rheumatism, etc., made me miserable. Had no appetite until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acted like magic. I am thoroughly cured." N. B. Seeley, 1874 W. 14th Av., Denver, Col.

Rheumatism.—"My husband was obliged to give up work on account of rheumatism. No remedy helped until he used Hood's Sarsaparilla, which permanently cured him. It cured my daughter of catarrh. I give it to the children with good results." Mrs. J. S. McManis, Stamford, Ct.

brought in, and a lovely bank of bright blossoms and green foliage graced the front of the rostrum. Several young ladies of the church acted as ushers and did the work with ease and grace that were a comfort to the audience. Three-fourths of the audience were women. Singing was by a quartette choir—Hattie M. Leach, soprano; Sadie Barrows, alto; Fred L. Chesley and Clayton Churchill, tenors; Loy Eyster, bass. John W. Chute, organist. The meeting opened with the singing of the anthem "Hark, Hark, My Soul." In this as in other selections they were at their best and were thoroughly enjoyed listening to them. Master Ralph Penfold sang a solo, "In the Old New Hampshire Village." There is surely something in hereditary, and this boy bids fair to surpass his mother as a singer. During the evening the choir sang to the tune of "Forward, Christian Soldiers," Isabel Shirley's.

OXFORD COUNTY W. C. T. U. SONG.

Dear old Oxford County, with thy mountains

And thy sparkling rivers fairest in the land,

Many sons and daughters who have won renown, Born within thy borders share with thee their pride.

Chorus.

May the flag of purity and of the right,

Wave from East to West held by ribbons white.

Rare the gems and minerals thou hast brought to light,

May the jewel, Virtue, shine with radiance bright.

God and Home and Country have thy loving thought,

Then shall peace and plenty ever be thy lot.

Then Miss Angell conducted the devotions, reading a part of the nineteenth

Psalm, and asking the blessing of Almighty God.

The president, Mrs. Chapman, introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs.

Anna Sargent Hunt of Augusta, state superintendent of the W. C. T. U. department of scientific temperance instruction in the schools. Mrs. Hunt wore a plain dress of dark green cloth trimmed with velvet, and with a cerise silk vest edged with lace. She held the slightest attention of the audience for 51 minutes. She gave an exhaustive review of the preventive work done by teaching the youth of our land the dangers of alcohol and narcotics, and made an earnest plea for the saving of the rising generation from the curse of intemperance.

Miss Angell pronounced the benediclargest and most efficient Unions, and an added membership of 62 active and 3 honorary members. The result of Mrs. Sargent's labors among us, I say one result, for the influence of her instructive public lectures, her helpful talks and the example of her consecrated life cannot be summed up and told in words. And much less can the good influence of our several Unions be gathered up and estimated. The reports of the Supts. of the various departments can only indicate the lines along which special effort has been made, and give a brief summary of its tangible work.

In looking over the records of the Convention since the W. C. T. U. work was organized in this county in 1887, I found there had been Unions at Denmark, Kezar Falls, Fryeburg, Oxford, Andover and Rumford Falls, which no longer exist. On writing to these towns to learn the cause of this decadence and see if they could not be encouraged to renew their allegiance, I found the same story repeated in varying forms: "We have too many other organizations—there is no time for this."

Now we all know that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is the pioneer in woman's work, and the forerunner of the multitudinous women's clubs of today. They have all sprung up within the last quarter of a century, and are multiplying every year, so that every little village and hamlet has its clubs, literary, historic, scientific, musical, etc., and its whist and tennis clubs. And every church organization finds an efficient co-worker in its denominational club evolved from the old-time sewing circle. Setting aside these aids to the financial machinery of our churches, all the other clubs, however pleasant, instructive, elevating, refining and enjoyable—are centered in their own membership. It is for themselves they exist. They reach out no helping hand to those around them.

There is no other organization which has so high ideals and aims as so broad results as the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Its scope as given in the National statement of its principles is "the educating of the young, forming a better public sentiment, reforming the drinking classes, transforming by the power of Divine grace those who are enslaved by alcohol, and securing the entire abolition of the liquor traffic."

It has, however, through the clear vision which has come to its membership of the basic unity of all reform forces and the inter-relation of each with all other evils, widened its scope until there is no wrong against which it has not lifted up its voice, no good which it is not allied. It is the chief factor in State campaigns for statutory prohibition and constitutional amendments. It began the movement for Scientific Temperance Instruction in the public schools, and has been instrumental in securing laws to that end in all but three of the States; and secured Congressional legislation by which all the territories and the District of Columbia are brought under the same beneficent statutes. We should consider too its work among the children in Sunday schools, Loyalty Temperance Legions and Kindergarten; its efforts to influence college students and young women, training and organizing them for a philanthropic life, and its evangelistic work for non-church members, for railroad employes, soldiers, lumbermen, miners, especially for drinking men of all classes; and its efforts to reach paupers and prisoners. It has also championed the cause of woman's ballot, the labor movement and social purity. In fact, it reaches out helping hands in every different direction, and it is permeating public sentiment through innumerable channels.

Is there not work enough to satisfy the ambition and energy of every philanthropic woman to be misunderstood as narrowly condemning women's clubs. I rejoice in everything that tends to educate and expand a woman's mind, to widen her views of life, broaden her sympathies and refine her mind and heart. But while she is seeking these things for herself, at the same time she has a duty toward others; for we none of us live to ourselves, and in many ways applies the warning, "these things ought ye to have done and not to have left the other undone."

The motherly heart of this organization is proved by the earnestness of its efforts for little children to save them from the evils of the world. And a knowledge of parental influence is a priceless boon to humanity. Every mother should fully understand the wonderful influence of her own mind, heart and physical condition upon her embryo child. The importance of this teaching is particularly emphasized to some of us by the experiences of our own lives. Reforming men and women, who are given over to evil habits, is a slow process in the regeneration of the world, but by a proper education of the children evil will become eliminated.

The W. C. T. U. has done a great deal in educating public sentiment all along in the different lines of reform. It was surprising that with the strong temperance sentiment which prevails among the best people of our nation that in our recent war "army saloons" should have been allowed. It is affirmed that in all the armies of the world, the use of alcoholic beverages figures! A drunk soldier, or an officer intoxicated, or a dozen of them in that condition, are explanations of failure and disaster! Only men of temperate habits in places of responsibility. The U. S. Commissioner of Labor sent out letters of inquiry to 7,000 business establishments employing over 3,000,000 men to ascertain the relation of drink habits to labor, and had replies from 5,363—stating they employed only temperate men, assigning as reasons, "to guard against accidents," and "the unreliability of drinking men." The changes made on our Grand Trunk R. R. last year, resulted largely, it is said, from a determination to free the service of temperate men. And the same is becoming true on all our great lines of travel. The public safety demands it. And also corporations must not risk the financial losses drunken employees entail. The complicated machinery of the present time requires clear, active brains and steady nerves to operate it with safety.

While the social and disastrous effects of the alcoholic drink is recognized by every intelligent person, it seems strange to our womanish understanding that its manufacture should be allowed by a Christian Nation! And yet our Government enters into partnership with the brewers and distillers, having a revenue on all which is manufactured; and for money, licenses men to deal it out to the public! But when harmful food, bad beer for instance, is sold; the whole nation is righteously indignant and a systematic course of inquiry is at once inaugurated with a view of bringing the offenders to merited punishment. And we have our Gov. Inspectors for milk and other food products and whatever is found unwholesome is destroyed. Could any conscientious Board of Health fail to condemn all products of the brewery and distillery, and tobacco in all its forms, as unwholesome and dangerous to those who consume them? And our Christian Nation is already sending ship loads of rum and beer to Porto Rico, Cuba and the Philippines "in the interests of trade!"

With regard to the tobacco habit, I wish to quote the opinion of some of Maine's well known educators: Pres. Chase of Bates College says:—"It injures the user's health, lessens his mental energy, lowers his ideals and blunts his moral sensibilities." Pres. Hyde of Bowdoin College says:—"I have known students in nearly every class in college, who have left college with nerves unstrung, power of persistent effort destroyed and aspiration for a life of usefulness dulled and deadened as a direct result of constant and excessive smoking."

The Prin. of Bangor High School, H. K. White, says:—"In an experience of 22 years with high school scholars, I have never known a boy form a habit of smoking without utterly unfitting himself for school work." I saw in statistics of 1890 that the tobacco bill of this nation was $600,000,000 or $9.50 per individual, while that same year the expense of the nation for public education was $200,000,000 for $3.12 per capita, against $9.50 for tobacco, and $14.25 per capita for spirituous liquors! Thus making $1,500,000,000 worse than wasted, a million times worse than wasted!

That was the direct cost of the rum and tobacco for one year, but who can estimate the indirect cost to the nation in the loss of physical and mental power, and the time lost, the loss of labor, sickness caused by the habits, the crimes perpetrated, the insanity created and the pauperism?

Life insurance statistics show that alcohol shortens the life of the user nearly one-half. The total abstainer has an average of 64 years of life, while the drinker of alcoholic liquors has an average of only about 35 years.

The Supreme Court of the United States has voiced the opinion that "The police power of the State is fully competent to regulate the liquor business, to mitigate its evils, or to suppress it entirely."

Why then is not this done? Is it because public sentiment does not support the action? How is it in our own communities, which are miniatures of the nation? Are people living up to the requirements of the laws of our State? If not, who is responsible?

The weak and cowardly excuse of Cain, "Am I my brother's keeper?" is still the shield behind which ease loving souls seek to hide. The question, "How far we are partakers of other people's sins?" is one which it would be well for us each to ponder.

Women, though not having the right of franchise, can do much toward remedying public evils; for they can and should mould public sentiment in a large degree. No new laws are needed to give women this privilege. It is universally conceded that a woman's tongue is her inherited right! So whatever evils we deplore, we can if we will make them time, so unpopular as to become infirmities of the flesh. But is it for the young we would raise the strong barrier of public opinion against everything which will harm them physically, mentally and spiritually.

Then too, with regard to the social purity question. When every decent woman and pure minded girl shall recognize the indecent Scarlet Letter on every man of impure life as clearly as they do on his victims, then and then only can we expect this evil to cease.

When Nehemiah was filled with zeal to repair the walls of Jerusalem, his beloved city, he set every man to build "over against his own house" and soon the city was encompassed by a strong, high wall. And so the great army of the W. C. T. U. each working to repair the wrong in her own vicinity, in union with the thousands working all over the country, will eventually build this nation in justice, temperance, purity and righteousness.

Do you not suppose those Israelites were too self centered and introspective. The results of their own work seemed so small and meager, they soon began to feel that it amounted to so little it was not worth the trouble. While from a larger knowledge of the work, they would have seen themselves important factors of the whole, and their work un-secure! Every white ribbon is a silent protest, not only against intemperance, the tobacco habit, immorality, profanity and Sabbath desecration, but against everything else which a boy or girl feels to be wrong. You will see this in their actions, if you closely observe them. The very fact of such an organization in a town is a defence against a host of evils, as well as an educator of public sentiment.

IVORY SOAP PASTE.

In fifteen minutes, with only a cake of Ivory Soap and water, you can make a better cleansing paste than you can buy.

Ivory Soap Paste will take spots from clothing; and will clean carpets, rugs, kid gloves, slippers, patent, enamel, russet leather and canvas shoes, leather belts, painted wood-work and furniture. The special value of Ivory Soap in this form arises from the fact that it can be used with a damp sponge or cloth to cleanse many articles that cannot be washed because they will not stand the free application of water.

DIRECTIONS FOR MAKING.—To one pint of boiling water add one and one-half ounces (one-quarter of the small size cake) of Ivory Soap cut into shavings, boil five minutes after the soap is thoroughly dissolved. Remove from the fire and cool in convenient dishes (not tin). It will keep well in an air-tight glass jar. COPYRIGHT 1898 BY THE PROCTER & GAMBLE CO. CINCINNATI

Maine is not diminished because of these new duties and responsibilities, and that she looks with confident expectation to an increase of at least 500 in our mem-this convention, as she had been so many times in this county, and added:—"Will you please present to your convention a greeting of love and good wishes from me, mingled with the prayer that this year may be one of great advance in all our departments of work."

Mrs. Stevens recommends that we "emphasize the total abstinence feature and try to secure at our public meetings signers to the total abstinence pledge, as well as new members to our society." The wisdom of this suggestion will commend itself to every Union and we trust the presidents and secretaries will see that it is carried out, as we also will try to do at this convention.

The motto of the W. C. T. U. Army of Maine is "Not by might nor by power, but by my spirit saith the Lord of Hosts." Laboring with reliance on this Omnipotent Aid our work will surely be established.

It may be a gratification to his excellency, the governor of New Hampshire, to learn that in at least one of the rural districts of his state, "Rag End" of Conway, so-called, Sunday-school was started with an encouraging attendance, last Sunday, in the new Union hall just over the border. They have a library of a couple of hundred good books by the generosity of the Union Social Circle which consists largely of West Fryeburg people. Next!

NORWAY AND VICINITY.
Dr. Annette Bennett has moved from Home block into Beal block and has the tenement formerly occupied by Mrs. Margaret Favor.

A. May of West Milan was in Berlin, Wednesday, on business and made The Reporter office a pleasant call. He also incidentally remarked that he remembered the first paper that was brought into that town, the Norway Advertiser.

Sunday evening, there was a large congregation in the Congregational church, the occasion being the sermon before the high school graduating class. Singing was by the choir. The pastor, Rev. E. S. Rideout, read the third chapter of Proverbs, and chose for his text Luke ix, 57—"Lord, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest." The sermon was in Mr. Rideout's practical every-day style, and was an appeal to the scholars to have and exercise that purpose which cannot be swerved.

A Forest Blaze.

A fire got started in the underbrush on the north side of the Waterford road near the Norway town farm, last Friday, and burnt over a good many acres. It looked very much like rain and in fact it did rain, Thursday evening, and Mr. Knight who lives on the thirly place burnt some brush and on the following morning the fire caught from this.

The red schoolhouse was saved though the fire burnt round it and the windows were taken out and put in the frog ponds. Word was sent to the village and C. B. Cummings & Sons' crew of men and others went to fight fire. The blaze was got under control at about four o'clock and perhaps spread over fifty acres of land.

E. G. Allen and wife of New York stopped at the Beal's House, Friday night, en route for their summer home in Sweden. Mr. Allen is a native of Sweden and as he said, "I shall stay at the old farm on which I was born 49 years ago to-morrow." Mr. Allen has expended considerable money on the old place and has a very pleasant summer home.

Dr. George M. Twitchell of Augusta, editor of the Maine Farmer, was in town, Saturday, and called on the Advertiser. In the afternoon, he attended the meeting of Norway Grange, and addressed the members. Mr. Twitchell is a pleasant man to meet, and an interesting public speaker. We enjoyed conversation with him, and the Grangers tell us that he made a good speech.

With the compliments of the Advance Publishing Co. of Chicago, we received a copy of the latest book by Rev. William Curtis Stiles. It is entitled "A Matter of Business and Other Stories." The stories were written with a purpose—to illustrate the practical workings of Christian dealings with our fellowmen. Mr. Stiles has made them interesting too, and we heartily congratulate him on his success as an author. We take pride in it too, for he is a Norway boy. This work sells for 25 cents in paper and 75 cents in cloth, postpaid.

The Hallowell News says: The new landlord of the Hallowell House, O. Kneeland, so well known to the traveling men of the several New England states, arrived in town, Wednesday. Since his taking possession the house has been patronized to nearly its full capacity, and on one night when the hour for retiring arrived every room in the large house was found to be occupied and extra beds had to be provided for some.

While perhaps landlord Kneeland may not want it said, that the full register pages are due to his general popularity with the travelling public, it can be said, nevertheless, that the new management begins most auspiciously.

Mr. Kneeland has been in the hotel business twenty-seven years and with this experience, a successful experience as it is, he can hardly be else in the new Hallowell House than the right man in the right place.

Though more recently from the Beal's House in Norway, where he built up a prosperous trade, he also has been equally fortunate in other New England states and at present is sole owner of a fine summer hotel in Harrison.

A general air of prosperity pervades the establishment, since his coming, and the house may be said to have now put itself on the list of paying institutions.

Mr. Kneeland is not only a good landlord but a business man.

Letter to Merritt Welch.

Norway, Me.

Dear Sir: No merchant wants to be shabby. What does he mean by shabby? He may mean his clothes. What is shabby for one is dressed up for another. He may mean his carriage and pair—he may not have any carriage and pair. He may mean his house, out-houses and fences. That's what we mean. No merchant wants his house and barn and door-yard fence—if he has such a thing as a door-yard fence—to go shabby.

Shabby means crying for paint; and crying for paint is destruction. The cheapest way to be handsome and prosperous, as to one's paint, is Devote lead and zinc. It is twice as good as lead and oil, lasts twice as long. Besides a merchant would rather not make a mistake in a matter of business. Devote is economy; anything else is waste.

Yours truly,

F. W. Devote & Co.

Eastern Oxford Christian Endeavor Local Union will meet at the Congregational church, some time in the latter part of June.

Norway Municipal Court.

Jacob McKean of Paris is in trouble again. Saturday, Sheriff James R. Tucker brought him into court, on a charge of assault and battery on one of his neighbors, Samuel E. Marshall. The trouble arose over a fence.

At the trial the fact came out that McKean threatened to kill Mr. Marshall. McKean was required to furnish $400 bonds to keep the peace for a year. As he couldn't do it, he was committed to jail.

A chorus of eighteen voices has been organized in Dixfield and Charles Walker chosen leader. Much may be expected from this chorus, as it is composed of some of the best of Dixfield's well known singers. It is not decided yet whether they will join the Maine Festival chorus or not. They meet, Friday evenings, in Music Hall.

FARM & GARDEN

PLANTING STRAWBERRIES.

Desirable Plants and the Right Depth For Setting Them.

All strawberry growers are aware that it is only the plants formed by the runners that should be used for the new plantation. These have yellowish white roots, and can thus be distinguished from the older plants, which have a long stem, at the lower end of which are black or brown roots (Fig. 1), many of which are dead or broken. If plants of good quality, which can be depended upon to give large crops, are desired, those selected for planting should have good crowns and well developed roots (Fig. 2). As a rule only the first plants on the runners should be used.

Dealers in strawberry plants, when picking up the plants after they have been dug, generally remove the dead or diseased leaves and runners, and at the same time straighten out the roots and the remaining leaves. Sometimes the setting of the plants is necessarily delayed until late in the season, when, if the air happens to be dry, there will be great danger of the wilting and perhaps the killing of the plants from the heat and dryness of the soil and air. Under these conditions it will be advisable to cut off the leaves except one or two of the smaller ones, as by so reducing their surface the evaporation will be lessened. When plants have been purchased and have become dry or heated in the bundles and either place them in water up to the crowns in some cool, shady place, or to heat them in, so that the soil will be in contact with roots of each plant in moist soil, where they can be shaded and occasionally sprinkled. In a few days the plants that have not been killed will recover.

When the plants are being set, equal care should be taken that the roots are not exposed. Should the roots be dry, a pint or so of water should be given each plant before the planting has been completed, this will permit of the drawing of dry soil about it after the water has soaked in, and the baking of the soil about the plant will be prevented. In setting the plants a spade, dibble or trowel may be used. When the dibble or spade is used, a cut is made in the ground to the depth of six or eight inches, and the soil is pressed back in either direction by a side movement of the handle. In the opening thus formed the roots are placed, care being taken that they are not cramped and that they are so spread out that the soil can be brought in contact with each of them. When large plants, with a thick mat of roots are used, this is particularly necessary, as otherwise the soil would only be in contact with a layer of roots upon the outside of this bundle.

There is also considerable danger of loss if attention is not given to the depth at which the plants are set, they should be set at a depth that the bud will be just above the surface as at C in the second cut, for if deeper than this there will be danger that, especially on heavy soil, the bud cannot make its way through the soil, while if not deep enough a part of the roots will be exposed and the plant will be very likely to dry out. If placed perhaps a quarter or half inch deeper than it grows in the field, this will be sufficient to allow for the setting of the plant and will leave it in about the right position. In planting with the trowel the same method may be used as with the dibble or spade, but with a few plants many think it will pay to take somewhat more pains with the planting. A large hole is dug, and in the bottom of this a conical elevation is left, around and upon which the roots are spread.

After placing the plants at the right depth the soil is pressed against them with the dibble or hands, so that it will be in close contact with the roots.

How to Make Graham Pies.

Into a pint of graham flour stir one teaspoonful salt. Wet with boiling water enough to make a stiff paste. Roll this very thin and cut into cakes about three inches in diameter. Put into these a spoonful of apple sauce and fold them. Bake on tin sheets.

How to Make Lemon Drops.

Better lemon drops than any you buy at the store can be made at home by boiling a pound and a half of powdered sugar in a pint of water, with a teaspoonful of cream of tartar, and enough lemon juice to suit the taste. In half an hour pour into buttered dish, pull out into long sticks, and chop into convenient size. A good butterscotch candy is made by boiling two cupsful of sugar in two tablespoonfuls of water. Add a piece of butter the size of an egg, and when the mixture hardens on the spoon pour out on buttered plates to cool.

How to Preserve Plants.

When the plants are freshly plucked they should be dipped in boiling water and left there for a few seconds. This instantly checks growth and kills all life. Then let them dry a few moments, and they are ready for pressing and mounting. Plants treated in this way will retain their shape and colors for years. All botanical specimens for museums are dipped in boiling water before mounting.

How to Make Whey.

To a pint of warm new milk add a teaspoonful of prepared rennet. Let it stand and then strain through a piece of muslin. This can often be taken when milk cannot and is a useful drink in feverish complaints.

soil is sandy a foot may be placed at either side of the plant. The continued and repeated pressure with the feet about the plant, as practiced by some, is not advisable, according to Professors Taft and Gladden, who treat of strawberry culture in a recent bulletin of the Michigan station, from which the foregoing extract is made.

To Prevent Swarming.

R. C. Aikin says there are two ways: "Have the queen and bees in one section of the hive just as the flow comes on, making a new or strengthening weak ones with the brood or by excluding the queen from part of the hive ten days prior to the flow; then at the beginning of the flow take the queen and unsealed brood to a new stand and give the bees and sealed brood on the old stand a ripe cell or virgin queen." Progressive Beekeeper.

FOOD FOR CHILDREN.

How to Feed the Little Ones to Keep Them Healthy.

As soon as teeth begin to come, saliva begins to be secreted and food more concentrated, then simple milk is not only permissible, but desirable. Go slowly with the new dietary and watch the movements. Allow such and as much as does not change markedly the color and consistency of these out of the normal. It is the identical rule that obtains in feeding young calves. If things go wrong, move back to or toward milk, or milk and long boiled strained gruels, or a tested baby food. But ordinarily it is safe, to give meat juice, soft boiled egg, scraped ripe apple or peach, orange and grape juice, other fruits baked or stewed, potato sparingly, cream and butter moderate-ly, bread, soups and very small portions of tender beef and chicken, chopped fine. Seedy fruits, hard or fibrous fruits, sweet dishes, jellies and the like, coffee, baked meats, pies, rich cake, preserves—these are the class of articles that will cause regret.

It is thoughtlessness in allowing, say, sausage or doughnuts to reach a baby's hands and mouth that leads to trouble, rather than misjudgment, where any mother sets out seriously to give her baby only what she finds (by the movements) day by day, it can do well on. Where milk (always to be continued, in some form, as a liberal constituent) is not relished, it often will be by beating up an egg, taking half, filling the cup up with milk and salting and sugar- ing a little.—New Voice.

How to Make Sauce For Chops.

A hot sauce for chops is made as follows: Oil an ounce of butter, stir in gradually a dessertspoonful of white mustard and a good pinch of cayenne. Chop finely a few chillies and add to the above. Mix all together and pour over the meat. Another sauce: Pour some sliced onions in dripping till they are brown, add some brown sauce and stew all together for a few minutes. Pass all through a hair sieve, add a squeeze of lemon and serve.

How to Detect Meningitis.

A severe headache is usually the first symptom, and especially in children, should then be observed. The headache may continue for a day and then apparently cease. On the second day violent sickness appears, and the patient vomits frequently. When this ceases the headache returns, and it is more severe than before. A high fever accompanies the first headache. It disappears and with the second appearance of the fever returns with new force. The brain becomes congested. It is then the head begins to draw back. If a physician is not called before the disease reaches this stage his services are likely to prove of no avail. The parent should not neglect calling a physician promptly when delay might result so disastrously. The spots are only a symptom, and they may appear at any stage. In fact, they have been known to appear only after death.—St. Louis Dispatch.

How to Make Dried Apple Pies.

Pick and wash one quart of dried apples and put in a porcelain kettle with two quarts of water and two of cider. Let this stand overnight, and in the morning place on the fire and simmer three hours. Then lay in (but do not stir) two quarts of sugar and simmer two hours longer. Then turn into a stone pot and put away for use. Make the pies the same as green apple.

Mrs. Biram Ellis of Rumford Falls has visited her daughter, Mrs. Chas. Ellis.

Hon. S. W. Matthews will be the guest of State Assessor, Hon. Otis Hayford, while in town.

Thomas Reynolds has recently had some old miners looking at his mica mines. They say there is nothing in the United States equal to it. The mines are thought to be worth working for the feldspar alone. Mr. Reynolds has already taken out some twelve different kinds of minerals. It is expected considerable progress will be made, this season, toward developing the mines.

The trustees of the Androscoggin Valley Agricultural Society will hold a meeting on the society's grounds, at an early day, to look over the repairs and improvements to be made and decide about June and August repairs. The track wintered finely and although never an early spring track, will be ready to jog on in a few days. The buildings stood the winter snows and winds much better than a year ago, and the track and grounds can be put in first class shape at a comparatively small expense.

How About the Caterpillars?

If one would raise fruit the trees must be cared for. The experience of last year in the caterpillar-infested districts of the State ought to have been worth something to the owners of orchards. Certainly it was there found that the ordinary methods of destruction by hand work were entirely inadequate to the task. This was learned after a desperate and expensive struggle with the enemy, and too late to save the foliage of the trees. The expense was incurred, yet the trees, if not stripped, were left green, and repeat after heavy rains till the trees are in blossom. If the work is started at once and is thoroughly done, by the time the blossoms open the hungry horde of leaf eaters will have all started. Spray thoroughly with Paris green, and repeat after heavy rains till the trees are in blossom. Bird S. Coler, Comptroller of New York City, is the author of an important article on the Abuse of Public Charity, which will appear in Appleton's Popular Science Monthly for June. Mr. Coler, whose position has enabled him to see at close range the actual working of the pauper system, is very emphatic in his condemnation of it.

The ice in Rangely Lake went out the 8th and 9th of May this year. The dates of the clearing of the lake in past years since 1882 are as follows: 1882, May 12; 1883, May 14; 1884, May 13; 1885, May 15; 1886, May 3; 1887, May 13; 1888, May 21; 1889, April 30; 1890, May 2; 1891, May 10; 1892, May 4; 1893, May 9; 1894, May 2; 1898, May 7; 1898, May 9; 1897, May 12; 1898, May 13; 1899, May 8-9.

Elmer R. Snowman, the Rangely guide, who was arrested, last spring, for guiding without a license and found guilty by a jury at the September term of the Supreme court, has secured the case will be heard at the July session of the law court here. The means, a finish fight to test the constitutionality of the much-talked-of guides law, Snowman applied this month for a license but was refused. Wealthy sportsmen are understood to be behind the guide in what cannot be other than an expensive test of the law.

Perry of Waterford conducted the services.

"I Must Go to Willie."

During our civil war there was a woman in Maine who received a letter which ran thus: "Willie is sick; he is dying." The mother read the letter, and looking up to her husband, said: "Father, I must go to Willie." "No, you cannot go," he replied. "You know there is a time of boyhood between you and Willie." She did what the Christian mother always does when her boy is in peril. She spread that letter before the Lord and prayed all night. Next morning she said, "I must go to Willie. I must." "What wife," he said, "I do not know what will come of this, but of course if you will go there is the money." She came down here to Washington, and the man in the Executive Mansion who had a heart as tender as a woman's—Abraham Lincoln—brushed away a tear as he wrote, and handing her a paper said, "Madam, that will take you to the enemy's line, but what will become of you after you get there I cannot tell." She took the paper and came down to the line and the picket; she handed him the pass, and he looked at it and at her, and said, "I know it," she said, "but here." "I know it," he said, "but here." Willie, my boy, is dying in Richmond and I am going to him. Now shoot! He did not shoot, but stood awed and hushed in the presence of a love that is more like God's than any other that surges in the human soul in its deathless selfishness.

All that mother thought of was her boy. Smuggled through the lines, she went down to the hospital. The surgeon said to her, "Madam, you must be very careful; your boy will survive only excitement." She crept to the cot after cot, and kept at the foot of the one where her boy lay, and putting up her hands prayed in smothered tones: "O God, spare my boy." The sick man raised his white hands from under the sheet; the sound of his mother's voice had gone clear down into the valley and shadow of death, where the soul of the young man was going out in its ebbing tide. Raising his hand he said, "Mother, I knew you would come." That boy is a man to-day, saved by a mother's love. [The Progressive Age.]

SAVED BY A POSTAL CARD.

Thousands who have written for one of the free trial bottles of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy have literally had their lives saved by a postal card. They got the trial bottle, and it proved to them that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was the only real cure for diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Bladder and Blood, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia and Chronic Constipation. They bought a large sized bottle of their druggists and it benefited or cured them (the above is not an idle statement, but the result of careful investigation). You can do the same thing. If you are in doubt as to whether you have trouble with your Kidneys or Bladder, put some of your urine in a glass tumbler and let it stand 24 hours. If it has a sediment, or is milky, cloudy, or discolored, it is ropy or stringy, pale, or discolored, you should lose no time in taking Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It can be had of all druggists at $5.00. It is a large bottle, or six bottles of the medicine is without question the surest medicine of the age to stop such danger of the kidneys as pain in the back, a frequent desire to urinate especially at night, scalding burning pain in passing urine, inability to hold urine and all the unpleasant and dangerous effects produced on the system by the use of whiskey and beer.

Send your full name and address to the DR. DAVID KENNEDY, CORKBOROUGH, Roundout, N. Y., and be sure to mention the Oxford County Advertiser, when a trial bottle, with pamphlet, of valuable medical advice, will be mailed to you absolutely free. The publishers of this paper guarantee the genuineness of this liberal offer.

CONSISTENCY THE JEWEL.

But Don't Undertake to Talk it to a Woman.

"No," she said, "I am a vegetarian not strictly because I believe eating meat is harmful to a person; there is another forcible reason why we should not partake of flesh—we have no right to kill animals for food or for any other purpose. I don't wear feathers on my hat, you see."

"I am inclined to agree with you, Miss Fenlow," he replied. "I think we eat too much meat, or most of us do, and as for killing birds in order to obtain ornaments for hats that is reprehensible."

"Ah," she exclaimed, "I'm so glad you take that view of the case! It is gratifying to find a man who has thrown off the savage instinct and is willing to admit that the beasts of the field and the birds of the air have rights. Why, I would no more think of partaking of a piece of beef or lamb than I would think of hurling myself from a house top."

"I see, however," he said, after a short pause, "that you still wear shoes and gloves that were made from the skins of animals which were killed for the purpose of—"

"But the dark look upon her face caused him to cut short his remarks, and they never discuss the meat subject any more.—Chicago News.

A coal dealer had occasion to call on one of his customers and found him sifting ashes. With business instinct he inquired: "Well, my friend, what kind of ashes are you sifting now?" "I can't say exactly what kind they are," was the reply, "but I know they are not the ashes of the just."—Richmond Dispatch.

A Misapprehension.

Tobacco and the Baby.

I was asked one day to go and see the little baby of a man.

He was weeping. He said, "Doctor, will you see my baby?" I said I would. I went to the house, and when I got there I said, "Where is the first child?" "There is no first child," he said, "there is no fire here, doctor."

I said, "Put down that pipe! Throw open the window! Let me see the baby!" And there was the little baby gasping for breath.

He said to him, "This man has put tobacco in the room with his filthy nicotine smoke. It would have choked me, nearly."

I threw open the windows and I instantly threw the pipe and all the tobacco out of the window. I rubbed the man out for a minute. I was angry with him and I said, "What is the use of my praying for that baby?"

"Oh, doctor, it is stomach complaint!" "Stomach complaint! What stomach could stand this smoke? The stomach of a strong man could not do it."

I started and prayed, and I asked God to have mercy upon the man. "How he stinks!" He has stunk this whole house, and stunk this baby, until the little one has no stomach to digest anything. Lord, how he stinks! Have mercy upon him!

"I will quit, doctor; I will quit." He did quit, too, and the Lord had mercy.

There was nothing wrong with the baby. I opened the window and the little thing vomited a little. I rubbed the little stomach, and it vomited up literally four feet. I am not exaggerating, the smell of tobacco.

You have no idea how many children have been murdered in their little colic homes by men smoking tobacco. In the rooms where the little ones are sleeping, never thinking that they are poisoning their children, and never thinking they are poisoning their wives.

Do you know how deadly nicotine poison is? I have seen experiments with nicotine poison like this: In Edinburgh, to illustrate the professor of toxicology showed the strength of nicotine poison by taking a feather and passing it through a man's pipe that had been lugged up with nicotine. The pipe that had had been a long time in use. The bowl of it had become of a peculiar color.

He passed down that pipe a small feather, through the end of it and out. Of course it was covered with a dark brown stain.

He took the feather and opened the mouth of a poor puppy dog, and put that stinking throat, and that dog died in minutes. This is the strength of nicotine poison. This is what nicotine is. It is a brain poison. It is a stomach poison. It is a nerve irritant.

Now, alas for the canine that has not a license.
